

Popular Narratives and the Experience of War:

A Veterans' Public Forum

- How does American culture conceive of war and military service?
- Do these conceptions harm veterans and reinforce the “civilian-military divide”?
- Where should veterans’ lived experiences fit into the American narrative of war?

Where: Carolina Student Union
Room 3408

When: April 27th, 2019
10:30AM—12:00PM

Discussion Panel:

Eric Burke: PhD candidate at UNC-Chapel Hill, GWOT veteran

Kate Dahlstrand: PhD candidate at UGA, GWOT veteran

Joe Kassabian: Author of The Hooligans of Kandahar, GWOT veteran

Dr. Michelle Moyd: Ruth N. Halls Associate Professor of History at IU- Bloomington, Somalia veteran

Veterans Writing Workshop

Veteran? Then you are invited to stay afterwards for a veterans writing workshop. Workshop will run from 12:00pm—4:00pm. The workshop is designed to empower veterans with narrative and storytelling strategies so that they may share their own military experiences.

Lunch is included for workshop participants.

Veterans register here: <https://unc.live/2E7NIj1>

Follow on Social Media: Twitter: @UNCVetsWriting or Facebook.com/UNCVetsWriting

For more information visit: <https://hpg.unc.edu/home/uncvetswriting/>

or contact Davis Winkie: jdavisw@live.unc.edu

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL

humanities
FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD